Over 800 prominent South Floridians gathered October 19 at Parrot Jungle on Miami's Watson Island in support of needy children in Latin America. They assembled for the 10th Annual Seeds of Hope Extravaganza to raise funds for America's Developing Smiles. Participating sponsors were Eloquent on the Bay, TODAY'S GROCER Food Trade Publication, Commerce Bank, and others.

Beginning in the early morning, groups began to travel to the Seeds of Hope Bazaar, which the ladies of South Florida look forward to for the quality and good prices of the products offered.

Afterwards, in a separate wing, Barbara Palacios, Miss Universe 1986 and Marian de la Fuente opened the luncheon with warm words of welcome and appreciation for such a large attendance. Father Alberto offered his blessing to all present and the concert, Jeremias, from University Music Latino, entertained the ladies with his songs while they enjoyed an exquisite lunch.

Following Jeremias' interlude, attention was focused on the styles by international designer Angel Sánchez who exhibited his "In the Mood for Love" collection. Symmetrical lines and black and white colors dominated the runway. Some reds and salmon colors in simple and elegant lines received much applause from the ladies present and ended in a standing ovation.

"We are very happy because this year we have had an incomparable record attendance and that translates into major contributions benefiting our children," said Evelyn Villanueva, Vice President of the Miami-Dade chapter.

The 11th Seeds of Hope Extravaganza will be celebrated in October 2007.
